The Contributors:

Walter J. Bell earned his MBA at Maryland in 1970. In addition to his prize-winning work in management science, he took second place in the American Contract Bridge League Rookie Grand National Pairs Championship in 1979.

Louis M. Dalberto earned a BS in IE at Penn State and an MS at Lehigh. He has worked for Air Products since 1973.

G. R. Doolittle, Manager — Inventory and Distribution, joined Glidden in 1959. He has a BS in business management from Ohio University. He and his wife live in Berea, Ohio, and have three children.

James L. Farrell, Jr., is Chairman of MPT Associates, Chairman of the Institute for Quantitative Research in Finance, and a member of the Finance Faculty at NYU. He has degrees from Notre Dame, Wharton, and NYU.

Marshall L. Fisher teaches at Wharton. He began his career as a systems engineer for IBM. His research is on the use of computer models for productivity improvement and he has consulted to many organizations.

Arnold J. Greenfield, a PhD student, is the recipient of the IBM fellowship in Information Systems, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi.

Thomas E. Hatch, Jr., is Vice President of New Business at Mattel. He holds a Bachelor's from Notre Dame and a Masters from the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business. Past positions were at Mennen, Dunkin' Donuts, Miles Laboratories, and Gillette.

Ramchandran "Jay" Jaikumar teaches at Harvard and has over ten years of industrial experience prior to joining academia. He has made over a dozen first ascents of 7000 meter peaks in the Himalayas.

Jeffrey J. Karrenbauer earned his BBA at Notre Dame and his PhD at Ohio State.

Gerald M. Katz is Vice President of Management Decision Systems, Inc., with degrees from Rochester and the Sloan School.

Pradeep K. Kedia is a PhD student at Wharton. In 1981-1982, he was the IBM Fellow in Information Systems.

Peter Kolesar, Professor of MS at Columbia, has worked on the management of police and fire departments, problems in credit screening, medical diagnosis, reliability, and transportation. His current research interests are in logistics and improving the management of fleets of vehicles.

B. P. Lingaraj is Professor of Business and Economics at Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne.

Robert Gordon Mack earned a BS in business administration at Bloomsburg State College.

William L. Maxwell is a Professor of OR and IE. His research deals with manufacturing logistics and materials handling.

John A. Muckstadt is Co-director of the Cornell Manufacturing Engineering and Productivity Program (COMEPP). His research centers on large scale production, inventory and distribution systems.

Richard F. Powers is President of INSIGHT, Inc. He earned his BA at Rice, his MBA at Michigan State, and his PhD at Minnesota.

Paul J. Prutzman is manager of the Industrial Gas Division MIS. He is an avid skier, a member of the National Ski Patrol, and patrol director of the 40-member Hahn Mountain Ski Patrol.

Farhad Raiszadeh teaches at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga and has industrial experience with Iran National Industrial Company.

Bernard B. Rosenman is Chief of the US Army Inventory Research Office, which he started as a part-time activity in the mid-1950s.

Richard L. Sauder has been Director, Operations Research for Southern Railway since 1970 and has held the same post for the parent company, Norfolk Southern, since it was formed in June 1982.

Alvin J. Silk is Professor of Management Science and Associate Dean at MIT's Sloan School. His research has been concerned with marketing communications and new product development.

L. Joseph Thomas is the author of over 30 articles and three books, including Operations Management: Production of Goods and Services.

Glen L. Urban is Professor of Management Science and Marketing Group Coordinator at the Sloan School. He is co-author of Design and Marketing of New Products [1980] and Management Science in Marketing [1969].

Jacques VanderEecken is Dean of the School of Economics and Applied Economics, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium, and a Professor of Production Management.

William Marten Westerman, Division Superintendent of Southern Railway Company, was born in the Dutch East Indies and lived in Holland until 1946. After earning a BS at VMI and two years in the army, he joined the New York Central Railroad and has worked for railroads ever since.

Dominique Xardel is Professor in the ESSEC Graduate School of Management. He has an MBA from Columbia and is a Docteur d'Etat en Gestion.
